“Seeking the Lord’s Peace?”

1. We live in a time of turmoil; it seems to be everywhere in the culture and even sadly in the Church at times, on a human level. St. Paul speaks about peace today. What is it? Peace in the Scriptural and Catholic understanding is not simply the absence of conflict, which is a part of peace that is so needed today; but the deepest meaning of peace is the tranquility of order, or being made right in the depths of our souls with God: living in harmony with the Lord. How does this come about? By inviting the Lord to live His life in us, the sacred mysteries of His Passion, Death and Resurrection - in which He won the victory over the disorder and lack of peace caused by satan and the other fallen angels, by sin: original and actual, and by death in the world at large and in individual lives. Jesus wants to win that same victory in our individual and communal life, by His grace - if we allow Him to work over time.
2. A major help in bringing this peace about is what Jesus recommends today in the Gospel to the Apostles and invites us to do the same: to come away by yourselves to a deserted place and rest a while. To make a little retreat, to take a little vacation from everyday problems. We all need a rest now and then from our daily occupations and normal routine, especially if we are under a lot of stress in our life. We need time to re-charge our spiritual battery, so that we can then go back to our daily duties refreshed and renewed with a new perspective on life, in the Lord. This is why the Church so highly recommends making a spiritual retreat periodically. In fact the priests of the Church are required by canon law to take a 5 day retreat every year to help us grow closer to the Lord, so we can help the lay faithful hopefully draw closer to the Lord in our sacred ministry. I am taking mine in October this year. There are some nice places nearby if you ever want to do a formal retreat: St. Vincent’s in Latrobe, St. Emma’s in Greensburg, or at the retreat house in our diocese where I used to be pastor at: St. John’s in New Baltimore. Vacations too, even if they are not exclusively spiritual, can also help us to be renewed in the Lord. In pondering the beauty of the ocean, or the mountains, or the forest, this can remind us of God’s beauty and love and peacefulness. God truly uses the beauty of creation - if we are open to Him to fill our hearts with an inner peace, calm and perspective that can really help us to do better and live better when we return to the busyness of our daily life. Also making a regular good honest Confession brings peace beyond imagining.

3. Retreats, vacations, and Confessions are also opportunities to help us renew our good resolutions to follow the Lord more faithfully in daily life: to turn away from sin and selfishness and to open our heart and mind more deeply to His will and presence in our soul. For this to happen however, we must always strive to include God in the midst of our time away from the burdens of daily life. A vacation should never be a vacation from God and His will. We must plan it out to make sure if we are away on a week-end to attend Mass at the nearest Catholic Church. This is why I always put a reminder in my bulletin column in the summer about www.masstimes.org: which can locate the nearest Catholic Church for you and your family members when on vacation. Each Sunday also can be, if we make it that in the Lord, a mini-retreat, a day to spend in prayer and relaxation, so that we can be recreated in the Lord for the other 6 days of the week. Don't squander the gift of Sunday, which so many in our culture tragically do - just seeing it as another day of the week. Also each of us, whether we fully realize it or not, needs a day a month or a few hours a week to just spend in quiet with the Lord. Fr. Silvan said that to me when I told him that I was becoming a pastor in 08: to remind people of this truth. This is something husbands and wives should be sensitive to, especially if you still have children at home who can be quite demanding on your time and energy many levels, as you well know. Work it out so that each of you can have some time regularly to relax, to pray, to go to Confession, or to go on a spiritual retreat periodically. In order to grow in holiness all of us need special times to be with God, to allow Him to renew us and show us how to be more like Jesus in all that we say, and think, and do. As Jesus says elsewhere in the Gospel, "Come to me, all of you who are weary and find life burdensome; I will refresh you, for my yoke is easy and my burden light." May we all find that inner peace that all of us are searching for, and may we discover it in deeper union with the Lord, for as St. Augustine famously said in his Confessions, "Our hearts were made by You O' Lord, and our hearts are restless until they rest in You." God bless you.
